New cleaning system from WOLF-Garten

Freed from blockages

Just one movement for a clean run

If the channel is full, then the lawn tractor ceases to function. That means going through the following routine: getting off, opening the collector and laboriously removing the blockage from the discharger channel. That problem has now been solved by WOLF-Garten for its expert lawn tractors from the 900 series: A handle placed directly next to the driver's seat allows quick and simple cleaning of the ejector channel.

Blockages occur in the ejector channel from time to time. No need to panic, but it takes a great deal of time and effort, and the fingernails become dirty, to remove the grass. But there is a perfect solution available. From now on, the WOLF-Garten Expert 900 lawn tractor is equipped with a special cleaning system for the discharger channel.

A lever is installed directly next to the driver's seat, which can be pulled upwards with a simple movement. It can be used to effortlessly open up the lower part of the ejector channel. The driver removes the grass blockage without having to rise from his seat or having to remove the collector box.

If the blockages are stubborn, the clever system has a further advantage. Because, when the channel is opened, the mowing mechanism can be switched on. Thus, allowing larger blockages to be removed.

Press Release

The cleaning system has another pleasant side effect. When the highly efficient cleaning jets start to work, the water and dirt from the mowing mechanism exit via the duct opening and do not land in the collector box.
